ACPO

The Advisory Committee on Postulants for Ordination is an annual event in the Ecclesiastical Province of Canada. This is a weekend conference during which time a candidate will have interviews with clergy, lay people and a person who is skilled in psychological evaluation. During this event, a candidate will be tested regarding a call with the wider church community. Before a candidate leaves the conference, their recommendation to the Bishop on a status as a Postulant will be shared with the candidate.

Selection and Formation for Ministry as a Priest in the Diocese of Eastern Newfoundland and Labrador

Dear Friends,

Thank you for your interest in ordination to the Priesthood in the Anglican Church of Canada through the Diocese of Eastern Newfoundland and Labrador. This brochure includes information on our process of discernment and selection and I invite you to consider it as part of your reflections. I welcome your inquiries if you want to learn more and would be happy to share with you some of the joy I have known over my years of ordained ministry.

With every blessing,
+Geoff

Candidacy Process

The Candidacy Process in the Diocese of Eastern Newfoundland and Labrador can run for three to four years. Persons who hope to be ordained are welcome to apply for admission as a postulant. The Postulancy Committee recommends to the bishop individuals who may be considered as postulants. These postulants then enter a period of supervised formation for ministry which include formal theological education.

The committee takes many factors into account in the selection of postulants. Personal suitability is essential. Applicants are assessed for their authenticity, their sense of call, exemplary moral character, vibrant and maturing faith, and demonstrated leadership ability. In addition, the committee is seeking postulants who will help the diocese to meet the challenging needs of the Church.

Taken together, these factors sometimes necessitate difficult choices among gifted applicants.

The diocese may exercise discretion in shortening the period of postulancy as, for instance, in the case of candidates who have already been approved by another diocese or have already completed formal theological education. Life experience may also be considered. In any case, the minimum period of postulancy will not normally be less than one year.

Inquiry and Application

Individuals who believe themselves called to the ministry of a priest should make contact with the Executive Officer to the Bishop of Eastern Newfoundland and Labrador. They must meet with the bishop. A preliminary interview will be arranged. Inquirers who expect to complete the academic requirements for ordination sometime in the next three years may be invited to make formal application for admission as a postulant. Because the process of application provides the diocese its primary opportunity for the discernment and affirmation of priestly vocation, the screening involved at this stage is extensive.

The application includes:

- the completion of an application form,
- completion of a parish commendation by the incumbent and four lay persons from a parish in which the prospective postulant has been active for at least one year.
- the names, addresses, and phone numbers of five referees,
- sign a release of information.
- Ordination prerequisites of the Anglican Church of Canada must be met.

Based on the information provided by all applicant, the Postulancy Committee may wish to interview the prospective postulant. Upon recommendation from the Postulancy Committee the Bishop may recommend that the prospective postulant attend The Advisory Committee on Postulants for Ordination, ACPO.

Confirmation of postulancy is subject to a criminal reference check and the submission of such medical certificates as may be required. Applicants must meet with the Diocesan Medical Officer. Applicants who are not chosen to be postulants will be redirected to their own pastor for further counsel. Those who have been interviewed may also ask for specific feedback from the Executive Officer to the Bishop.

Postulancy

Postulancy normally lasts three years, and is devoted to conscientious formation for ministry. During this period, the postulant establishes several mentoring relationships.

Each postulant is asked, or assisted, to establish a relationship with:

- a spiritual director,
- a working group or representative of the Postulancy Committee, and
- the bishop (postulants are asked to meet annually with the bishop).

During postulancy, most candidates will complete a degree at an accredited theological institution. The costs of theological education are borne by the individual. A limited amount of bursary assistance is available to postulants; application is made through the theological college. Please note that the stipend for beginning clergy is modest; for this reason, applicants are strongly encouraged to ensure the affordability of any debt they expect to owe beyond ordination.

Ordination

A postulant becomes an ordinand when the bishop decides to proceed to ordination. Status as an ordinand is conditional upon the availability of a placement deemed appropriate by the bishop, and the mobility of the postulant.

Prior to ordination and under the direction of the bishop the Examining Chaplain will meet with the candidate for ordination for a pre ordination evaluation. This evaluation will use Competencies for Ordination to the Priesthood in the Anglican Church of Canada (2010) as a guide to determine the candidate's suitability for ordination.

This evaluation will include a review of:

- Christian Heritage and Anglican Identity
- Cultural and Social Context
- Capacity for Leadership
- Skills for Teaching and Learning

Upon completion of the pre ordination evaluation the Examining Chaplain will make a report to the bishop. The final decision to ordain rests with the bishop.

Following ordination the newly ordained priest will receive a mentor for a period of a year.
